Eaquals International Conference

21 – 23 April 2016

Lisbon, Portugal

SANA Lisboa Hotel
Welcome from the Eaquals Chair

Dear Colleagues,

I am very pleased to welcome you to the 2016 Eaquals International Conference in the historic and beautiful city of Lisbon. 2016 marks the 25th anniversary of Eaquals' foundation, so this is a special occasion for our Association, and an opportunity to look back at what Eaquals has achieved so far while looking forward to future opportunities.

As usual, our conference programme offers practical professional development opportunities and insights for those working in all kinds of language education institutions, whether their roles are academic or focused on business development. The five thematic strands – teaching and learning; course design, CEFR and assessment; managing for quality; staff development; and business and marketing management – have been chosen to reflect main areas of interest for Eaquals members and others working in the field as you strive to enhance the quality of your students’ learning experience and to meet the demands of an increasingly competitive educational environment.

We are very grateful to all our speakers, both our invited guests and those drawn from the Eaquals member network. Without them there would be no conference. We would also like to thank our sponsors - Trinity College London, Macmillan Education, LangLion, Guided e-Learning, Higher Education Marketing, Easymate, Oxford University Press, g.a.s.t. Gesellschaft für Akademische Studienvorbereitung und Testentwicklung, and telc GmbH - for their generous and continued support.

Thanks are also due to our local members, Camões, Instituto da Cooperação e da Lingua and CIAL Centro de Línguas who have advised us on the practical arrangements. Camões, Instituto da Cooperação e da Lingua have been most generous with their hospitality and we hope you will take the opportunity to join the reception at their impressive premises nearby and experience the warmth of their welcome.

We are sure you will find much in the programme to interest you, and plenty of opportunities to exchange ideas with fellow professionals, catch up with old friends and forge new contacts and relationships, as well as helping us celebrate our silver jubilee.

I hope you find the conference memorable and rewarding, and enjoy the delights of Lisbon, and I look forward to meeting you.

‘There is only one corner of the universe you can be certain of improving, and that’s your own self’. Aldous Huxley

Before you can manage others effectively you need to learn how to manage yourself through developing appropriate time and stress management strategies and habits. Effective management involves focusing on the most important aims, goals and tasks, whilst eliminating or ignoring the 1,001 distractions that prevent us from fulfilling our mission and achieving our potential. This practical workshop will provide managers with realistic strategies and techniques to manage their time more effectively and reduce their stress levels.

Participants will develop their knowledge and skills through:

- Understanding their current time management competences and weaknesses
- Analysing where their time currently goes
- Becoming more effective at setting priorities and planning their time
- Managing interruptions and distractions
- Sending and receiving emails efficiently
- Managing stress effectively
- Setting compelling objectives

<th>1600 – 1730:</th>
<th>European Profiling Grid symposium</th>
<th>Room: Castelo II</th>
</tr>
</thead>

This symposium will be introduced by Richard Rossner, and will feature five case studies carried out recently concerning the use of the European Profiling Grid (EPG). The work took place in three different countries, Bulgaria, Italy and Spain, and the case studies concern different aspects and uses of the EPG. There are two Bulgarian case studies. The first, presented by Svetla Popova (Optima) and Galya Mateva (AVO-3 Sofia, Honorary President of OPTIMA) co-author of the EPG, looks at uses of the EPG in preparing for quality assessment by inspectors, while the second by Galya Mateva focuses on using the EPG in intensive teacher training. The Instituto Cervantes, Spain, which, like Optima, was a partner in the EPG project, has also provided two case studies, one on using the EPG to analyse training and development needs, and the other reporting on a survey of different users and uses of the EPG within the Instituto Cervantes. Both of these case studies will be reported on by Marta Higueras, Head of Teacher Training Programmes at Instituto Cervantes. The Italian case study comes from Pierangela Diadori, the University of Foreigners, Siena, who worked with Letizia Cinganotto of the Italian National Institute for Documentation, Innovation and Research (INDIRE) to examine uses of the EPG in Italian state schools.

Each case study will be briefly presented, and followed by questions. There will then be a short round table to discuss the issues raised by other participants who work in contexts where the EPG has been or might be used.

Richard Rossner (Eaquals) has been Chair of Eaquals (AGM 2014-AGM 2016), and has been involved in language education for over 40 years, including as Chief Executive of Bell International and then Executive Director of Eaquals (2006-2011). Richard has worked on various language education projects on behalf of Eaquals, and is a member of the Council of Europe’s coordinating group on the linguistic integration of adult migrants.
0915 – 1600: Inspector professional development

Room: Castelo III

Session 1: Inspector guidelines update: Inspection, reports & the moderation process

Valérie Clochard, Binnie Hadjidimitrova & Sue Sheerin

In this session we will be offering inspectors guidance on some important issues, including:

- Updating report writing guidelines – the hallmarks of a good report
- Demystifying the moderation process: What is its purpose? What is expected of inspectors? What is expected of the Accreditation Panel?
- Difficult inspections: What can go wrong? How should inspectors react? Can difficulties be avoided?

Session 2: Course design & assessment - Standardisation session

Laura-Mihaela Muresan & Sue Hackett

The purpose of this session is to promote consistency in the way inspectors evaluate the two categories of course design and assessment.

We will explore a number of scenarios based on real situations with regard to these two crucial areas. What would you have decided for each of them? Discover how close your views are to other inspectors!

Session 3: Evaluating blended learning (including V7.1 update)

John Haagensen & Lyndy Cronin

V7.1 is about to go live, so we will start with a brief review of the Scheme and the documentation (Attendees will receive a hard copy of the new V7.1 Manual with the Blended Learning Appendix.)

In the second part of the session, the focus will be on blended learning itself. As the pace of change quickens, what new developments are inspectors encountering in LECs? How should digital and multi-media facilities be inspected and assessed? Share your experience and hear from others.

1600 – 1730: Market Place sessions

The Market Place provides an opportunity for members to network with each other and promote their services within our Association. Participating institutions will share information on their programmes and services and may present an opportunity to partner with other members.

<td>We would like to share our experience in designing and building a new website, based on dynamic content, less text and more graphics: lidenz.ru is the result of an in-house team project, with input from teachers and students and based on the popular word press platform. Our aim was to keep the site as simple as possible to navigate and prioritise information in a way that the not-so-important bits do not come up first. The inserted blog posts add dynamism to pages which is appealing to both site visitors and SE robots. We are looking forward to a short but lively and hopefully interactive session!</td>
<td>The presentation will examine ways that Quality Assurance has provided the holistic structure for this program, and has acted as the vehicle to improved teaching and student results. The presentation will quickly examine the role of mission and vision, making the program a process and not a paperwork activity, best practices, indicators and measuring success, the role of needs assessment, staff training and professional development, integrated quality systems and the maintenance of a dynamic approach. Every organization faces challenges and these will be highlighted. Some challenges included changing an existing organizational culture, integrating the values and expectations of a range of cultures and creating standards that work for a 13 language program.</td>

<td>With our international network, we are expanding our number of partner schools who share the vision to lead in our industry by defining and setting the framework we operate in. We see huge advantages for partner schools to be involved in key developments taking place in our network and the potential for them to contribute resources and know-how. We are looking for partners who can see the benefits of becoming part of a larger organisation whilst still retaining influence as an independent business. This presentation outlines the benefits of coming under the Eurocentres umbrella brand, the advantages over the competition and the unique language experience available in the Eurocentres network.</td>
<td>This presentation will look at a project to formally align NILE Online teacher development courses to the Eaquals Framework for Language Teacher Training and Development, focusing on the process, validation and outcomes. The process involved scholarships for teachers from 21 Eaquals LTOs on NILE Online courses and their feedback will be presented. We hope this will provide a model of best practice for Eaquals member organisations to look in depth at how professional development of teachers can be consistent and coherent with the phases, knowledge and skills in the framework developed by Eaquals.</td>

<td>With interesting developments in the worlds of English as a Foreign Language; Tech Entrepreneurship; Media Creation and Specialised Teaching Programmes - including the use of Technology in the Classroom, we will discuss some of the exciting new courses available in Alpha College of English.</td>
<td>Assuring the quality of an examination throughout the assessment process is a top tele priority. This is of course also true for language examinations on higher CEFR-levels, i.e. C1 and C2. The question we want to discuss here is: what are the CEFR-criteria for upper languages levels, who needs a C1 certificate and how can these language skills be assessed? This is especially relevant, considering the five major principles of language assessment which consist of practicality, reliability, validity, authenticity, and washback.</td>

Day Two: Friday 22 April

0900 – 0940  What does ‘can do’ mean to you? Linking practicality and validity in language assessment  Anthea Wilson & Ben Beaumont  Castelo IV & V

This interactive talk will review best practice and ideal scenarios in assessment, including the application of ‘can-do’ statements, authenticity, practicality and reflective practice. Having briefly shared their own experiences about assessing what students ‘can do’ and ways to assess ability accurately, the speakers will elicit the audience’s views and engage in a discussion on what is both ideal and realistic in assessment practices. This will be followed by a brief appraisal of Trinity College’s GESE, ISE and teacher education assessments, focusing on how well-written exams can both encourage good practice and support the development of learners’ 21st century skills. This session will be repeated at 1130 on Saturday 23 April.

Anthea Wilson is Head of Test Production at Trinity College London. Anthea’s background is in teaching and assessment, and her research interests include assessing speaking and the development of rating scales.

Ben Beaumont is TESOL Qualifications Manager at Trinity College London, the academic lead for Trinity’s teacher education programmes. As well as having a background in assessment and teacher education, Ben’s research interests include developing programmes to support best practice in teacher education.

0950 – 1030  Flourish not flounder: using teaching competences for professional development  Kirsten Holt  Castelo IV & V

Modern-day teaching requires twenty-first century classroom skills. In response to this need, teaching competency frameworks have emerged to reflect the complex combination of knowledge, understanding, skills, values and attitudes required for effective up-to-date teaching. These have led to detailed teacher profiles which, whilst useful, perhaps are not being exploited to their fullest for meaningful progression. During this workshop, we will examine the theory behind teaching competency frameworks, their construction and how they are currently being used; before exploring how they can be used effectively for the teacher’s personal, evolving professional development. We will then go on to discuss ways of traversing the levels of competences effectively through a series of workshop activities which examine the relationship between a competence and real-world teaching. Throughout the session, participants will be encouraged to relate the activities to their own professional development in order to answer the question: ‘What does it mean for me?’ This session will be repeated at 1650 on Friday 22 April.

Kirsten Holt is Publisher of Teacher Professional Development at Macmillan Education, having worked in publishing for ten years. Before joining publishing, she worked in ELT as a teacher/materials writer through to a Director of Studies and trainer of teacher trainers. Kirsten is passionate about supporting people in their career development.

1100 – 1135  Is my C1 the same as your C1? Testing at a higher CEFR level between several languages  R. Sean McDonald  Castelo IV & V

Does my German measure up to your Turkish? Do you think your English is better than my German? Can all of this be measured? It may seem unlikely, but yes, it can be done! Participants in this talk – with or without prior first-hand experience with the CEFR for assessment – will gain insight into the assessment process and how careful use of the CEFR can help us do the impossible. Additionally, we will gain insight on how best to adapt CEFR-aligned formal examinations across different categories all the while maintaining validity and fairness and furthering inclusion. This session will be repeated at 1205 on Saturday 23 April.
R. Sean McDonald is the head of English Assessment at telc - language tests. Originally from California, he studied at the University of Washington. After working as a language trainer for the German Air Force Academy, he moved to Frankfurt. His passions include educational technology, particularly for language teaching.

Identity crisis - The business of boosting teacher identity
Sophie Elisabeth Larkin
Castelo IV & V

The concept and significance of learner identity has dominated recent Second Language Acquisition (SLA) literature and yet research into the identities of English language teachers and its correlation with continuous professional development seems lacking (Kayi-Aydar, 2015). Current findings suggest that continuing professional development has a positive impact on a teacher’s sense of self-esteem, which in turn propels the development cycle (Larkin, 2015, Mora et al, 2014). Thornbury (2001) claims in “The Unbearable Lightness of EFL” that the domain of ELT suffers from a chronic lack of self worth. With this in mind, a case study was carried out at Torquay International School, in order to find out to what extent an ongoing, flexible and individualised system of CPD may have a positive impact on teacher identity. By extension, the case study considered carefully the financial implications of such a model; one which is applicable to both intensive and extensive frameworks of learning. The session attempts to provide rich debate regarding the “value” of CPD in the eyes of the stakeholders and with respect to the quality of teaching and learning in the school.

Sophie Elisabeth Larkin, I have been working in ELT for 19 years; most recently as Senior Teacher Trainer at IPC, Exeter and currently as Academic Director of Torquay International School. Having completed my MA in TESOL, I am continuing to research the theme of Teacher Identity and its correlation with a teacher’s developmental trajectory.

Preparing for a successful Eaquals inspection
Sue Sheerin
Castelo IV & V

What is it like to have an Eaquals inspection? What do the inspectors do when they come to our language centre and what will we need to prepare? This session will be led by one of our most experienced inspectors and will answer many of the most common questions asked by those who are considering applying for Eaquals accreditation. We will look at a typical inspection programme and talk through the different elements of the visit.

Sue Sheerin (Eaquals) is an Eaquals inspector and member of the Accreditation Panel. She has been involved with Eaquals since its inception and regularly conducts inspections in German, French and English. Sue was formerly Academic Manager of the Bell School, Cambridge and Director of the Language Institute of the University of Sussex, and currently undertakes freelance work as an educational consultant.
Assessment, understood in the widest possible sense, has become central in discussions about the learning process. And as it takes hold with education ministries and school communities, the average teacher is expected to know about and use different assessment approaches and instruments in their daily practice, and to feed exam results into their teaching plans.

As a result of this, teachers express a need for training in the principles of assessment, not only for a better understanding, which will in turn have a positive impact on their teaching, but also in order to be fairer to students in terms of the guidance offered in preparing for a test and so that teachers can make an informed choice about which test might be most suitable. There are many challenges to face when planning assessment literacy programmes, the first being to ascertain what exactly teachers need to know, and to what level of understanding, from the increasing amount of information and documentation available. But the most demanding challenge of all if the long term effectiveness of the training is to be ensured, is that of tailoring training in assessment to the needs, real and perceived, of different professionals, and taking into account the different purposes and functions of assessment within a varied range of contexts.

This session will present what principled assessment practice means and address current developments and future challenges in the field, whilst considering the role that assessment plays in the pedagogical trinity “learning, teaching and assessment”.

Neus Figueras holds a PhD in language testing from the University of Barcelona. She has worked in the regional Ministry of Education in Catalonia for 20 years coordinating curriculum development and certificate exams for schools teaching languages to adult learners. She lectures part-time at the University of Barcelona and at the Universitat Pompeu Fabra. She has been involved in a number of international research and development projects and collaborates regularly with the Council of Europe in the dissemination of the Common European Framework of Reference in relation with testing and assessment. She has published articles in the field of language teaching and assessment and is one of the authors of the Manual for Relating examinations to the CEFR (Council of Europe, 2009). She has recently published, with Fuensanta Puig, Pautas para la evaluación del español como lengua extranjera (2013). Edinumen. She has been a teacher trainer since the early 1990s, and has given courses and presented in universities in Spain and in different European countries, in Asia and the USA. She was the first President (2004-7) of EALTA (European Association for Language Testing and Assessment), and she is now an expert member (www.ealta.eu.org). She was awarded the Third International British Council International Assessment Award in 2015. Neus Figueras’s attendance is supported by Trinity College London.

CPD (Continuing Professional Development) in the language teaching field has gone through a number of different stages of development. With notable exceptions, not so many years ago CPD was either left to the individual teacher, who could access a narrow range of options, or was based on a small number professional development activities made available to all teachers in their institutions (Level 1).

In the 21st century the picture has changed for the better: many accrediting bodies expect CPD policies and procedures to be in place that offer learning opportunities to all staff and the range of professional development channels and opportunities available has mushroomed e.g. through access to online courses and webinars (Level 2).

I will argue that despite these advances CPD practices in many institutions still fail to address a number of key challenges including: the lack of effective needs analyses of staff professional needs, the ineffective use made of new learning technologies, insufficient attention paid to developments and research in mainstream education and neuroscience, not sufficiently linking CPD activities to changing teacher performance or student outcomes, the absence of appropriate mechanisms for evaluating the effectiveness of CPD.

In this talk we will explore briefly the road travelled (Levels 1 and 2), review some current issues, before focusing on some of the options available for helping institutions take CPD to Level 3.

Peer observation: making it work for lasting CPD

Carole Anne Robinson

Peer observation is an area of continual professional development which can provide a wealth of learning opportunities for the observee and the observer. However, setting up a scheme can be complex, especially when trying to take into account all of the wishes and constraints of everyone involved.

During the talk, I will refer to two case studies of unsuccessful peer observation and will suggest some practical ways of dealing with some of the issues that come up.

This includes ensuring everyone has the opportunity to benefit from and contribute to peer observation in a way that is useful to their own context, with time for personal reflection.

We will also look at how we can use peer observation as part of the process of continual professional development, rather than something simply done in isolation once a year in order to meet a language school’s accreditation requirements.

Carole Anne Robinson is Senior Trainer at Norwich Institute for Language Education. She is involved in training teachers on CELTA and Delta courses as well as closed - and open - enrolment courses for teacher and trainer development. She is particularly interested in observation, discourse analysis and Dogme ELT.

Integrating culture in teacher-training courses: Collective story-telling

Marta Genis

Contemporary narrative theory began with Russian Formalism and developed through the work of different authors, being the most prominent Vladimir Propp, who published Morphology of Fairy Tales in 1928. Propp identified the main functional elements of dramatis personae in Russian fairy tales and the relationship of these elements to each other, categorizing 31 recurrent functions with a stable continuity and a fixed order. Fairy tales are present in all cultures and represent allegories or symbolic representations of human nature, addressing values of transformation and personal growth. This workshop aims to introduce a practical technique that we have found to be successful in culture-based courses for teachers: the creation of a collective fairy tale using Propp’s functions. The activity provides many advantages for future teachers: keys for understanding how student active participation improves learning, how group work helps develop organizing and socializing abilities, and how peer-evaluation raises one's progress awareness.

Marta Genis holds a degree in Spanish Philology, a M.A. in Applied Linguistics, and a PhD in English Philology. Former coordinator of the Languages Institute and Director of the Department of Applied Languages at Nebrija University in Madrid. Her main research interests are Academic writing, CLIL approach and Teacher Training.

Facebook & Instagram marketing

Stephen Shortt

Facebook is the most popular social network in the world with over 1 billion monthly users. Facebook has more data on their users than any other platform on earth. If you want to find out how you can target your ideal customer base using their proprietary ad delivery platform - along with their growing user base on Instagram - come along to this introductory workshop where you will learn about how to best use the platform to get your message in front of your target audience based on their location, demographics, interests and more.

By the end of the workshop you will have - I hope - a much better understanding of how this platform can help your school promote your courses on Facebook and Instagram.

2a Assessing oral proficiency  Ines Paland-Riedmüller & Claudia Pop

Assessing learners’ progress in oral proficiency is part of every language course reality. To enhance the transparency and comparability of oral assessment across language courses it is crucial to reflect the specifics of assessing oral proficiency in various contexts and to know and employ suitable methods. Hence, the workshop offers the opportunity to learn about a theoretically founded discourse on basic concepts of assessing speaking and shows practical methods effective for quality assurance.

First, basic factors and concepts will be introduced, such as specifics of the assessment setting and rating methods. Subsequently, methods of quality assurance such as trainings, scoring guidelines, monitoring and raring grids will be presented and illustrated by examples. In working phases the participants will get the opportunity to reflect on how to apply the tools to their institutional context.

Ines Paland-Riedmüller (g.a.s.t. / TestDaF-Institut, Deutsch-Uni Online) is Head of Deutsch-Uni Online. She has been working for DUO since 2008 in different areas. Her responsibilities to date include the development of workshops on e-learning and online tutoring. In addition, Ines teaches a seminar on online tutoring at LMU Munich. She holds a M. A. in German as a Foreign Language.

Claudia Pop (g.a.s.t. / TestDaF-Institut, Deutsch-Uni Online) is test development officer at the TestDaF Institute since 2012. She is responsible for the speaking section of the TestDaF as well as for rater training and monitoring. She also coordinates the inspections of test centres. Claudia holds a B.A. in Philosophy and Educational Science and an M.A. in Second Language Acquisition.

Lessons where the teacher is endlessly plodding through the course book, Exercise A-G -- does that sound familiar? It goes without saying that such lessons are neither motivational nor do they address individual needs. And how much learning is actually taking place in such an environment?

Our goal is, of course, addressing differentiation in the classroom through meaningful supplementation, but we had to ask ourselves: Do we provide our teachers with a framework for this through training, support and resources? Have we given them explicit permission to go beyond the course book from time to time? Have we helped them understand when, how and with what they can do it? In this interactive workshop we will provide building blocks for successfully supplementing the course book without undermining it. Participants will engage with practical examples and come away with the tools for a CPD on relevant supplementation.

He is very interested in teacher development and training, teacher observations, materials creation and the application of new technologies in classes.

Learner autonomy is one of the recent trends in EFL and also in general education. However, do we really know what it means to be an autonomous learner? Are we, teachers, educators, and teacher trainers, ready to "leave them kids alone"? How does one train their learners to be effectively autonomous and how does one make oneself break out of the old habits and stop taking all the responsibility for what and how our students are learning?

In this workshop the participants will engage in a variety of practical activities that will help us find our way towards effective autonomous language learning. We are going to look at simple activities that can be used with both learners and (trainee) teachers to help them get rid of the urge to depend on someone ‘smarter’ and with ‘more authority’ and, by making independent decisions, get the most out of their learning (and teaching!) experiences.

Jekaterina (Kate) Kazanovska started her career as an English teacher in IH Riga, then went into admin, school management, and teacher training. Day Three: Saturday 23 April

0900 – 0945: Plenaries

Digital marketing self-assessment for language schools

Philippe Taza

The presentation offers language institutions tools they can use to evaluate their current digital marketing efforts, and set future goals based on industry best practices. Using illustrative examples from language schools around the world, we’ll examine a range of tactics for brand-building, enhancing online visibility, and generating quality inquiries through both organic and paid channels.

Philippe Taza, founder and CEO of Higher Education Marketing will lead participants, step-by-step, through a digital marketing self-assessment that includes the following:

- Identifying target audiences and setting digital marketing goals
- Researching and identifying relevant SEO keywords
- Leveraging multi-language and user-generated content
- Building and sustaining social media communities
- Using Pay-per-Click (PPC) to generate quality leads
- Optimizing Google Analytics to track and measure results

Philippe Taza is CEO and Digital Analyst at Higher Education Marketing. He began his career in education marketing in 2001, as a recruitment officer and recruitment manager at a private college in Vancouver, BC. The learner’s own language

Philip Kerr

For many years, nobody talked much about the learner’s own language, but it never went away! Received wisdom held that it was best to stick to a policy of teaching and learning a language through that language, and banning the other. Now, however, there is a clear research consensus that the learner’s own language has an important and unavoidable role to play in learning another language. What principles should apply? How can we make best use of this language? What, exactly, should we do in the classroom? And what can teachers do if the class is multilingual or if they don’t share the learners’ language?
Philip Kerr is a teacher trainer, lecturer and materials writer who is based in Vienna. His publications include the coursebook series ‘Straightforward’ and ‘Inside Out’ (both Macmillan) and the award-winning ‘Translation and Own-Language Activities’ (CUP, 2014). His current interests include the development of a new vocabulary learning app and an online professional development programme for teachers. He blogs about technology and English language teaching at https://adaptivelearninginelt.wordpress.com

3b Vocabulary apps and language schools

Philip Kerr

Castelo I

Acquiring vocabulary is the single most important task of the language learner. Memorisation of lexical items is a necessary step in this acquisition process, and years of research suggest that flash cards are the most valuable tool to help learners with this task. While the days of vocabulary bags in classrooms are far from over, digital flash cards are changing the vocabulary-learning landscape. This workshop will explore some of the apps that are available, their strengths and limitations. At the same time, we will look at the implications for vocabulary teaching in language schools. How should teachers consider changing their approach to vocabulary teaching? How can language schools make the most of these new digital possibilities?

At the Eaquals Members Meeting in Nice in November 2015, a group of three Eaquals members ran a session on principles and practices in language assessment, focusing on valid and effective testing and assessment. We ended that session with a call to participants to join with us for a subsequent event, with a narrower focus but a broader cross-section of Eaquals members’ practices. This workshop is the result of that call and will focus on the challenges and possible solutions in the assessment of Speaking, with case studies and discussions of current practices led by representatives of Eaquals member institutions from across Europe. We will discuss testing vs. assessing Speaking, test formats, task types and task design, marking criteria, standardisation and alignment to the CEFR.

Nadine Early: is Academic Director at ATC Language Schools in Ireland. She has worked in English language education for the past 18 years as a teacher, trainer and academic manager. She has an M.Phil in Applied Linguistics from Trinity College Dublin. Her current area of interest is fostering learner autonomy through assessment and curriculum design.

Varinder Unlu has worked in ELT for 24 years in all contexts from private language schools to FE and HE, teaching students from 6-80 years old. She has been a DOS/Academic Manager since 2002 and has worked at International House, London since 2010. She is also a teacher trainer.

Anthea Wilson is Head of Test Production at Trinity College London. Anthea's background is in teaching and assessment, and her research interests include assessing speaking and the development of rating scales.
Eaquals first developed its own Profiling Grid 10 years ago (North and Mateva 2006). This has since become a much fuller instrument, the European Profiling Grid (EPG), available in over 10 languages and in an online interactive version. In addition, an Eaquals working group spent 4 years developing the complementary and more extensive Eaquals Framework for Language Teacher Training and Development. However, these are not the only such frameworks in existence: as part of a new ECML project to decide whether work should be done to bring together relevant descriptions of language teaching competences, over 30 frameworks were identified.

The session will explore some scenarios for using, for example, the EPG, the Model of Key Competences for L2 Teachers developed by Instituto Cervantes, and the Eaquals Framework. Participants will then work towards some guiding principles for using such frameworks well in different situations. The session will end with a review of the guidance suggested, and further information about the ECML project.

3e-2 What's in a brand? Understanding brand identity and market positioning
Janet Galbraith
Castelo VI & VII

This session is a general introduction to understanding the power of branding and how to create a brand that accurately portrays the ethos of a company. Much more than just a logo, brand identity is something that every member of the team should engage with, your target customer understands and that can define and represent you as 'different' or 'unique' in your industry. This session will utilise case-studies and examples from globally-recognised brands to explore the concept of brand and will provide participants with a toolkit to review and refine their brand identity, or help them build a strategy for the future.

Janet Galbraith is the Principal of CES Edinburgh, the newest school in the portfolio of Centre of English Studies schools. Over the last ten years she has worked all over the world in both education and tourism, from leading hiking trips in Morocco to working as an EFL Teacher Recruiter in China. She has worked on brand development and strategy across a variety of businesses.
4a Connecting online content to your curriculum

Can online study be an integral part of our student’s learning experience, rather than a self-access afterthought? Using either a standard course book or a bespoke curriculum, the integration of additional external online resources is problematical for most schools: but it can be done. We will explore how to map your course aims onto an online system which automatically provides and marks relevant practice, extension, test and remedial work for learners; and will show how the data that this generates can feed immediately back into the system to produce personalised learning paths, monitor progress, provide clear audit trails and demonstrably improve both student results and experience.

David Coarsey is CEO and founder of Guided e-Learning (GEL), industry leader in the provision of online EFL learning. Because GEL works with quality English language institutes throughout the world, David has a unique and privileged view of the trends in online learning in schools.

4b Creating & maintaining a culture of quality

As members of Eaquals we are all committed to delivering high standards, but do we spend enough time and energy ensuring that a culture of quality exists at all levels of our institutions? This session aims to set participants’ thinking about how the paperwork of ‘quality’ can be made into reality perceivable both internally and externally.

Monica Green has been Executive Director of the International House World Organisation since 2008. She is also one of the owner/directors of IH Torres Vedras in Portugal. Her background is in both teaching and management.

4c What does ‘can do’ mean to you? Linking practicality and validity in language assessment

This interactive talk will review best practice and ideal scenarios in assessment, including the application of ‘can-do’ statements, authenticity, practicality and reflective practice. Having briefly shared their own experiences about assessing what students ‘can do’ and ways to assess ability accurately, the speakers will elicit the audience’s views and engage in a discussion on what is both ideal and realistic in assessment practices. This will be followed by a brief appraisal of Trinity College’s GESE, ISE and teacher education assessments, focussing on how well-written exams can both encourage good practice and support the development of learners’ 21st century skills.

Anthea Wilson is Head of Test Production at Trinity College London. Anthea’s background is in teaching and assessment, and her research interests include assessing speaking and the development of rating scales.

Ben Beaumont is TESOL Qualifications Manager at Trinity College London, the academic lead for Trinity’s teacher education programmes. As well as having a background in assessment and teacher education, Ben’s research interests include developing programmes to support best practice in teacher education.
4d Introducing the Eaquals framework for teachers of language for academic purposes

Tony Prince
Castelo VI & VII

While there has been a growth in the numbers of Universities offering courses in the language related to (and required for) academic study, such developments have often been somewhat ad-hoc, with institutions and individuals within unclear about the knowledge and skills required by those teaching on such courses. This framework aims to raise awareness of such requirements, so that those developing and recruiting for such courses can plan effectively, providing adequate support for those teaching on them. The framework is also intended to provide teachers with a clear picture of how they can progress within the field, developing their abilities and understanding as well as their career.

Tony Prince was Programme Manager for Presessional and Insessional courses at the University of East Anglia and is currently an Academic Director at the Norwich Institute for Language Education (NILE) responsible for training related to Tertiary education. Tony is lead tutor on the Masters and online courses in Teaching English for Academic purposes.

4e Integrating the tenets of project based learning in a general English syllabus

Ian Brangan & Rachel Dowling
Room: Castelo VIII

One of the core components of our general English course at Alpha College is project work. We currently have 12 projects developed which are carried out in all classes at different levels over a 12 week syllabus. Currently we are exploring how the tenets of project based learning can be incorporated into certain projects to maximise their benefit to the students. These tenets include allowing students a real choice in the design of the project, getting them to formulate a real question to answer, an in-depth inquiry that is not just copying from the internet, students choosing and voicing issues that are important to them, involving a critique and revision of output, and also offering them an audience for the work they have done. We will explore case studies showing these principles in action and invite participants in the workshop to share experience and expertise.

Ian Brangan MA RSA dip ELT is an Academic Development Manager, teacher, trainer, school’s inspector and educational consultant with 25 years’ experience. He has experience presenting both nationally and at IATEFL and Eaquals. His current areas of interest include Curriculum Development, Teacher Development, Materials Development, Pronunciation and Project Based Learning.

Rachel Dowling BA DELTA (Alpha College) is a teacher and trainer/educator with over 10 years’ experience. She has presented research and classroom practice nationally and her current areas of interest include Academic Management, Assessment, 21st century Learning Resources and Project Based Learning.

5a The transition to digital

Jonathan Dykes
Castelo I

Whether we like it or not, the language teaching business is changing. Both in terms of what teachers do in the classroom and also in terms of what it means to have students in a classroom. The change is happening slowly but irrevocably and it’s likely to get faster. Do we want to be part of the change or are we going to sit back, stick to what we know and watch from the side-lines as other, more technologically astute companies come and take great slices out of our market share? Maybe there’s a way we can combine our skills and experience with the best that modern day technology has to offer. This presentation aims to demonstrate what can be done, using tools and techniques that are readily available. It will refer to a pilot project which has been undertaken by one of the companies in our group.

Jonathan Dykes has spent most of his working life in the language teaching business. He started off as an English teacher but soon discovered that his talents lay outside the classroom. He is currently Chief Executive of the IHLS Group, which includes both International House Barcelona and Net Languages.
5b Managing your language school in the Cloud

Diana Urban

Managing your language school in the Cloud

How many students are booked with us this week? How many bookings have not yet been paid? How many classrooms are free today? How many quotations have gone out to potential clients? How can I develop my business further? How……” These are questions that a language school has to answer promptly and correctly on a daily basis in order to be successful. The seminar will demonstrate how a web-based administration system, specifically designed to answer these questions, can make the lives of decision makers and administrators within a language school easier.

A modern system must be cloud-based, safe and secure, easy to use and easy to manage. Easymate has offered such a solution since 2008. Implemented at various schools worldwide, the system is constantly being developed further in response to user input and market requirements.

Diana Urban is the sales and marketing manager for Easymate Software GmbH based in Vienna. With a background in Foreign Languages, she has since 2004 built up a company specializing in business consulting, as well as the sale of niche products and services. She speaks Romanian, English, French, German and Italian. Since 2013 she has been marketing Easymate around the globe.

Is my C1 the same as your C1? Testing at a higher CEFR level between several languages

Does my German measure up to your Turkish? Do you think your English is better than my German? Can all of this be measured? It may seem unlikely, but yes, it can be done! Participants in this talk – with or without prior first-hand experience with the CEFR for assessment – will gain insight into the assessment process and how careful use of the CEFR can help us do the impossible. Additionally, we will gain insight on how best to adapt CEFR-aligned formal examinations across different categories all the while maintaining validity and fairness and furthering inclusion.

R. Sean McDonald (telc GmbH) is the head of English Assessment at telc - language tests. Originally from California, he studied at the University of Washington. After working as a language trainer for the German Air Force Academy, he moved to Frankfurt. His passions include educational technology, particularly for language teaching.

Diversifying teacher competences with a focus on languages for academic purposes: exploring the needs of academics in two university contexts - Spain and Romania

In this presentation we compare two case studies of international universities, one based in Romania and one based in Spain. Set against the backdrop of internationalisation trends and the current language policies at tertiary level, the presentation will highlight some of the key challenges encountered by university teachers of different subjects. We will discuss their self-perceived needs for refining their academic language competencies and the implications for staff development and EAP teacher training. We will also share some practical solutions developed in our educational contexts and invite further thoughts from the audience. We hope that through this session we can make a modest contribution to the work already done by the Eaquals interest group focusing on competence descriptors for teachers of languages for academic purposes.

5e Learn how your learners learn. Multiple intelligences: The Greek case

QLS (Quality Language Services) is a network of leading language schools in Greece. In 2015 these schools administered the QLP MI Test (developed by Ariston Computer Academy and certified by the University of Nicosia), to 2500 language learners in order to identify their individual learning profiles in accordance with Gardner’s MI theory. The results of the test have proved invaluable to learners and teachers alike. Moreover, course designers will find them helpful in the production of future language course material. Knowing the profiles of individual members of a group enables teachers to cater for the eight different intelligences identified by Gardner by adapting the course material accordingly and providing differentiated instruction with all the concomitant benefits. Support material will be presented to illustrate how MI theory can be effectively applied in the FL classroom.

6a Teaching with technology: digital skills for 21st century teachers

In this presentation, we will provide a view on what knowledge on technology and digital skills EFL teachers need to have in the digital age. Many teachers and learning organisations around the world have enthusiastically adopted a wide range of learning materials and digital tools in recent years. However, the teacher training and development accompanying these adoptions has not always been successful, partly because it’s been often reduced to learning about the technical aspects of the learning technology, rather than on the pedagogical considerations around it. While developing the forthcoming Oxford Teachers’ Academy online ‘Teaching with Technology’ course (Oxford University Press), we encountered a number of views on the aims and topics the course needed to have. We’ll argue that the digital needs of teachers are not only related to learning how to use a specific tool or material, but also to being able to evaluate the pedagogical relevance of using a particular technology in class.

6b How to build and maintain strong relationships with customers

Michał Bartosiński

Customers are the most important asset of every company. A company can only succeed thanks to its customers: if you have their loyalty, they can become your best marketers. So it is vital to build and maintain strong, long-term relationships with your current and potential clients.

At our presentation you will learn:
- How to recognize „purchasing personalities“?
- What kind of customer data is worth gathering and how it can help your business?
- How to improve customer service in your language school?
- How to communicate with your current and potential customers?
- How to use inbound marketing to attract new customers?
- How important social media are for your customers?
- How to deal with difficult situations with your customers?

Michał Bartosiński, solutions architect at LangLion Platform, will set out the most important issues in building effective customer relations. His talk will be based on real-life cases and will share insights from language schools all over Europe.

Michał Bartosiński has been working in the area of new technology and education for 7 years. He is vice president of Primeon - a company providing new technological solutions. He has built its key brands: Prymus.info - an electronic gradebook and LangLion - a platform for comprehensive management for language schools.

6c Balancing the skills: the vital nature of Speaking

Bernadette Maguire

The discussion of foreign language teaching and learning issues in Spain, although much improved over the years, is still the subject of debate, continuing to enjoy a high profile in both traditional and social media.

The presentation describes the unbalanced language performance of university English language users, many of who had been studying English for years and even using the language in their professional lives.

A significant gap between candidates’ linguistic competence across the skills was identified, this occurring most commonly in this case in the area of Speaking. The CEFR was used in the initial gathering of data during which the issues were identified.

The importance of attempting to establish a more balanced overall language performance is discussed, how specific Speaking issues were identified and ways of addressing them described.

Results, both in terms of language proficiency and professional confidence are described.

Bernadette Maguire has worked in English language teaching and testing in Spain for many years. She has extensive experience with students and candidates of all language levels from primary students in Spanish schools to university students. She now works as an adviser in the Examinations Department of British Council, Spain.

6d Rethinking academic management for creative materials design:
a new MOOC for integrating language and cultural competencies in a specific field.

Ovidiu Ursa, Anca Colibaba & Irina Gheorghiu

With growing international mobility and new communication challenges, timely identification of niches and the development of effective solutions can become the key to success for language education providers. This presentation illustrates how a language centre or department can cooperate with specialists, students, NGOs in a specific domain to develop relevant language learning resources. The example we will present builds on a multilingual European project in the medical field. The main outcome is a MOOC with video components, illustrating contextualised communication (at levels B1-B2) and developing integrated language and pluricultural skills in 6 languages (EN, ES, FR, IT, NL, RO).
Ovidiu Ursa is the President of Quest, Romania. He lectures in medical English at the Cluj Medical University. He is very actively involved in materials development, testing and the pedagogy of languages for specific purposes. He is a Quest and Eaquals inspector.

Anca Colibaba is professor at the Medical University « Gr.T Popa Iasi » and the coordinator of the chair of languages; she has a wide experience in the field of adult education and online education: materials writing, methodologies and assessment. She has coordinated many national and international projects. Anca has an active involvement in civil society in nonformal education. She is a Quest and Eaquals inspector.

Irina Gheorghiu is doing a PhD at the Albert Ludwig University in Freiburg, Germany. She is particularly interested in studying cultural phenomena and their applications to specific fields. Foreign language teaching and learning is also one of her main preoccupations. Her activity in international educational projects is extremely prolific, which has contributed to her high level critical thinking skills.

6e Will feedback change everything? Evidence from the corpus and implications for the future role of assessment.

Elaine Boyd

In contemporary assessment practices, the teacher or tester is seen as expert in knowing what to assess and in managing assessment. But the grounds may be shifting as new technologies allow the next generations of learners to take ownership of both what and how they learn. This transformation indicates that feedback from assessments is becoming as important as scores. If so, then this raises questions about how we access the most relevant and meaningful feedback for learning. The Trinity Lancaster Corpus of Spoken Learner Language comprises over 3.5 million words compiled from oral assessments. This session describes how the corpus can demonstrate what is really going on in the exam room, which suggests that strategic and pragmatic competences may be as important as other more linguistic knowledges test takers bring to an exam. We examine how this data can inform and shape feedback and implications for classroom and assessment practices.

Elaine Boyd has been involved in language teaching, teacher training and assessment for over 35 years for international organizations. She has developed courses for teacher education, published articles on assessment and intercultural communication and is the author of several coursebooks. Her PhD investigated spoken language and pragmatics and she is currently working on the Trinity Lancaster Corpus of Spoken Learner Language.

1420 - 1445 7a-1 Bringing LOLA to life: delivering learning oriented language assessment at national level

Dave Allan & Helmut Renner

This session will present a 5-year project to deliver a new kind of assessment at national level. The CEBS group in Austria, working with long-term consultancy collaboration from NILE, developed a new concept for assessment in vocational school contexts (which was the forerunner for a major trend in assessment), the design and delivery of national language tests with both summative and formative purposes, combining systemic diagnosis at national level with innovative feedback to institutions, teachers and learners. The tests developed by CEBS covered both receptive and productive skills. This session will focus mainly on the instruments and tasks developed for the testing of writing and speaking skills, along with the modes of training, both face-to-face and digital, needed to enable a national language teaching workforce to be properly equipped to achieve high levels of inter-rater reliability. Hands on opportunities to use the tools developed by the project will be provided.
Dave Allan is the founding director of NILE, the Norwich Institute for Language Education, this year celebrating its 21st birthday. Since 1995 NILE has provided training and professional development for 40,000 teachers and ELT professionals from 65 countries, including within the UK's biggest MA in language education. Dave has worked worldwide as a trainer, consultant and project manager with the Council of Europe, DFID and the British Council, as well as national and regional education ministries. Recent projects have included major programmes of test development. NILE also has an extensive, ELTONS-nominated, online programme, on which Dave is working at present. He and Helmut are long-term collaborators and proud to be Eaquals members.

Helmut Renner is a founder member of CEBS. He is executive editor and co-author of CEBS publications. In close cooperation with Dave Allan of NILE he directed the technical development of an online assessment instrument in English for the Austrian ministry of education (the AOC-Check), delivered to 150,000 candidates. He has co-authored a number of international manuals for teaching French in the tourism sector with online learning activities and created within European projects a multi-media package designed to help learners and trainers to develop insight into business and vocationally oriented communication competence in 5 languages through 'PROMOTICS – a virtual company'. 1450 - 1515  7a–2 Optimizing test and courseware development  John H.A.L. De Jong
Castelo IV & V

The Common European Framework of Reference for Languages (Council of Europe, 2001; hence: CEFR) is frequently referred to, but mostly in order to retrofit existing exams to its scaled levels of proficiency or to claim the relevance of coursebooks. Exams that had existed for close to a hundred years after 2001 appeared to assess those levels and course books happened to just need a new cover in order to make them CEFR-proof. Few tests or course books have been designed specifically to operationalize the CEFR levels. This can be explained because the CEFR is insufficiently defined to ascertain a scientifically-sound relationships of course books and exams to the CEFR. Even the “Manual for relating exams to the CEFR” (Council of Europe, 2009) fails to provide a psychometric definition of what it means to be at a level. This presentation will offer a definition and procedures for operationalizing the relationship.

John H.A.L. De Jong  SVP Global Assessment Standards at Pearson, Professor of Language Testing at VU University Amsterdam is an expert on empirical scaling of language abilities. Before starting his career in language testing John had been teaching French for seven years in secondary schools.

7b A flipped, mixed and blended syllabus  Julie Anne Wallis
Castelo I

January 2015 saw our first Eaquals inspection. Following feedback, we had to focus on rewriting course syllabi. This workshop will involve participants in the decision making process from start to finish;

- the mapping of materials to the CEFR scales
- to skills focused F2F lessons which learners have to prepare for online
- guided conversation closely linked to each syllabus
- designing and hosting continuous assessment online
- learner self-evaluation and performance appraisals
- spoken and written feedback from all stakeholders
- change management

The workshop will look at the risks involved, how to engage the academic staff, and the learners in the process itself and how to predict and prepare for problems.

Participants will discuss and compare their own solutions at every stage and will then discover what actually happened, look at sample documentation and listen to testimonials from all our stakeholders.

Julie Anne Wallis (The London School, Thiene Italy) is director of The London School and AISLi Educational Officer. She has published materials and written seminars and workshops on behalf of AISLi and has presented at a number of international conferences. She works as a teacher, teacher trainer, materials developer and didactic inspector for AISLi.
This interactive, practical workshop aims to prepare schools for the future needs of students, staff and customers, ensuring the institution can grow and prosper in future market conditions.
That means looking at innovation - but not only technology. It means re-evaluating and upgrading classroom design, course & curriculum design, teacher development, management practices, staff training, customer service metrics, social media outreach etc.
In the workshop we will discuss each of these areas, looking first at trends in language education globally and then doing activities to apply these trends to our own institutional contexts - with take-away ideas for immediate application.
Activities for participants to carry out will include The Sailboat - for innovation skill development, The Digital Audit for evaluating technology use, and The Perception Map for customer service improvement.
The result is that participants have strategies to improve teaching, delight customers and protect the future growth of the school.

This workshop will review both a macro and micro-level approach to research-based CPD for language teachers. Recognising the need for teachers to be engaged in CPD to promote effective practice, we will use existing research practices and research findings to suggest areas for educational research which can support day-to-day teaching. By linking research practice to qualification achievement, we will also show how CPD courses develop teachers' analytical skills, laying a foundation for in-service research and development.

Having identified key research practices, the workshop will then move on to the actionability of professional development in a modern, busy language institute. It will focus on establishing a thread from justification of CPD event or research topics to putting in place a framework for evidencing staff development. Examples will be taken from an Action Research project in the Centre of English Studies in Dublin, showing how the theory of best practice can be turned into the reality of reflective practice.

The majority of our students learn English and other languages without difficulty however there are many students who struggle and find it challenging. Often these students get labelled as being difficult, disruptive, unresponsive or just bad language learners. Many of our teacher training courses such as CELTA, Trinity TESOL do not deal with students who have Special Educational Needs (SEN). Yet over ten percent of learners have a specific learning difference. In this session I want to talk about students with learning differences and how these affect general learning processes and the mechanisms of second language acquisition. I would like to present a number of case studies of such students taken from my experiences as a teacher to highlight the importance of being able to recognise the signs of SPLDs (Students with Specific Learning Differences) and give advice about how to deal with and help these learners.

Demystifying generation Y and Z: How to appeal to youth culture in a brave new world  Jacqueline Kassteen

As this year’s conference draws to a close, we take a step outside our world (of agents, academics, administrators, immigration officials, etc.) and instead, leap into the world of today’s youth culture. Teacher and learner psychologies: Two sides of the same coin  Sarah Mercer

Research in the field of language learning psychology has tended to focus predominantly on learners with comparatively little attention paid to teachers’ psychology. However, research has repeatedly shown that teacher psychology plays a critical role not only in their own personal professional well-being but also in the motivation and achievement of their learners. In this talk, I explore the relationships between teacher and learner psychologies showing how these are in fact two sides of the same coin. Examining three key areas, namely, motivation, self-beliefs and emotions, we will consider practical approaches grounded in empirical research and theory, which support teachers and learners in these areas. In addition, we will reflect on a range of factors that affect teacher psychology, considering institutional and leadership characteristics as well as personal and professional identities.

Sarah Mercer is Professor of Foreign Language Teaching at the University of Graz, Austria, where she is Head of ELT methodology and Deputy Head of the Centre for Teaching and Learning in Arts and Humanities. Her research interests include all aspects of the psychology surrounding the foreign language learning experience, focusing in particular on issues of self and identity. She is the author, co-author and co-editor of several books in this area including ‘Towards an Understanding of Language Learner Self-Concept’, ‘Psychology for Language Learning’, ‘Multiple Perspectives on the Self in SLA’, ‘New Directions in Language Learning Psychology’, ‘Positive Psychology in SLA’, ‘Exploring Psychology for Language Teachers’ (Winner of the Ben Warren Prize), and ‘Teacher Psychology in SLA’. What is Eaquals?

Founded in 1991, Eaquals is an international non-profit association of language education providers which aims to foster quality in language teaching institutions. To achieve these aims it has established a demanding set of criteria for accreditation, set out in the Eaquals Charters, and verified by an inspection scheme.

Eaquals also provides important opportunities for its members to share best practice and to co-operate in projects of mutual interest. The Association participates in international working groups with other leading organisations, such as the Council of Europe, the European Centre for Modern Languages, the International Organisation for Standardisation (ISO), and the Association of Language Testers in Europe.

Membership of Eaquals

Membership is open to private or state organisations which are involved in the delivery of quality language services or are in some other way committed to the achievement of excellence in this area. There are different categories of membership:

Accredited Members:
To become an Accredited Member, language teaching institutions must demonstrate they comply with the Eaquals Charters by submitting themselves to an inspection, which is repeated every four years.

Associate Members:
This category of membership is for organisations with considerable professional involvement in language education. The essential criterion is a commitment to the achievement of quality.

Individual Members:
Individual membership is open to both appointed Eaquals inspectors and to other language professionals who are not affiliated to an Eaquals member institution.

Project partners:
Eaquals reserves this category of relationship for those institutions which are not eligible to become Accredited or Associate Members but which wish a form of affiliation with Eaquals in order to enable them to co-operate with Eaquals and its Members in the development of language teaching and learning.

What are the advantages of Eaquals Membership?

- Access to an international network of excellent language centres, and attending regular meetings and conferences.
- Participation in a process of quality assurance which helps members to develop.
- Permission to use a name and logo which are an independent guarantee of quality for learners.
- The right to award Eaquals Certificates of Achievement (Accredited Members).
- Listing on the Eaquals website and in the 'Course-finder' section.
- Access to information on leading-edge developments and specialised training.

How do institutions become Accredited Members of Eaquals?

All language teaching organisations applying for accredited membership undergo an Eaquals inspection. Prior to inspection, you need to contact info@eaquals.org to receive full information about the accreditation scheme. Before first inspection we ask you to carry out an Eaquals self-assessment at your institution. There is also the option of a pre-inspection Advisory Visit and consultancy before inspection. You can download an Application form from the Eaquals website. Inspections normally take four months to organise.

Organisations not eligible for Accredited Membership but interested in Associate Membership or Project Partnership should contact info@eaquals.org.
